Twitter Thread by Ajay Acharya ■■ ■■■■■■ ■■■■■■■■

Ajay Acharya ■■ ■■■■■ ■■■■■■■■
@ajayacharya

I saw few supposed RW handles saying that they felt ashamed that their support for @narendramodi is being wasted. Some of them even said that the man lacks guts and that @myogiadityanath should take over. Though I never misjudge their intentions, I have a few words for them. 1/7

First: your outrage is more chronic than anything. For every reason, every moment you subject PM Modi to your self styled appraisal. You might want to know that you will not last a day in office, while facing the ordeal that Modi faces. Modi is here as a leader of the nation. 2/7

And your expectation of what he will do comes from your wishful thinking: and not from the aftermath of any action that you expected him to take. For a few of you, your choice and hope on Modi comes from your hate for a section of people, and not from love of your own faith. 3/7

Coming to the incidents of yesterday: you compared him and @AmitShah with Shaheenbagh agitation and your perception of their inaction. What you all are missing is that his detractors are expecting him to give him some attention. Are the perpetrators of CAA riots not in jail? 4/7

These crooks are expecting @narendramodi to commit a blunder, by way of taking strict action so that they can approach the international media as victims. And the worst thing is that they know that these "chronic outraging" RW handles are also pressing for the same action. 5/7

Remember that peace in Punjab was restored in the 90's with great sacrifice and patience. Yesterday was an attempt to fuel that unrest in Punjab again: and the only way it would happen is by Modi committing a blunder. Modi and Amit Shah will not let that happen. Trust them! 6/7

Lastly:
Yogendra Yadav is now shitting bricks.
Prashant Bhushan has dung on his face: how will he now go to the SC?
Rakesh Tikait is running for cover.
Small setbacks are always good to have, because the ultimate success is what we are all striving for.
Once again: #TrustNaMo 7/7

Please note that these tweets come from a Swayamsevak of 3 decades, at times where we were being heckled for canvassing for @BJP4Karnataka. From the son of a Swayamsevak of the 40s: who didn't get expect or get any recognition in these days when it's fashionable to be RW.

Yogendra Yadav booked under UAPA.
Rakesh Tikait booked under UAPA.
Twitter handles that instigated riots yesterday also under watch.
200 people detained.
Expect action now.