MYTH AND MYTHOLOGY:

All religions and all ideologies (eg: communism, liberalism and so on) are a part history and a part myth.

As for religious myths, the academic types might want to read Joseph Campbell's book, "The Power of Myth".

I put down below some quotes of his :

1. Each myth is psychologically symbolic. Its narratives and images are to be read, therefore, not literally, but as metaphors.
2. Myth is much more important & true than history. History is just journalism & you know how reliable it is.

As far as ideologies are concerned, their mythology lies in their tall claims about their success in the real world. As we all are aware, this whole ideology of communism has proved to be just a myth as it has failed everywhere.

Even Mother Russia has forsaken Communism and mobocracy rules there now! Liberalism's self-proclaimed victories are a pure myth too because there's no liberal state.

Even the liberal dreamlands such as the Scandinavian countries have had to adopt non-liberal policies to check jihadism and Islamism brought in by the migrants.

Besides the above, today's Mythology becomes tomorrow's history as Archeologists make new finds and historians turn up with new evidence. For instance, who would have believed that 4000 years ago Harappan people ate multigrain, protein-rich laddoos? Such a statement would have been considered ranting of a lunatic or at best a myth.

But Archeologists recently found exactly that 4000 year old multigrain, protein-rich laddoo in their exploration of the Harappan site.

This is a clear case of a myth becoming well-proved, scientifically accepted knowledge. So the point is there's no earthly reason for us to be frightened of the word "mythology " and shy away from LeLis bashing us up with that word.

Let's take it on squarely and hit back with all the power at our command.

Another instance of the same is that we are called Bhakts by LeLis, in turn can we call them Maino Bhakts or Pappu Bhakts?

Modiji has been doing this all through.

When the LeLis and others started the jibe, "Chowkidar Chor hai", all RWs put their DP as "Main bhi Chowkidar".

We didn't stop the usage of the word but turned it around & used it more often.

Hit back strongly at all such slogans of LeLis. We aren't going to bow down.
