The original thread was a mess!

2. CCP Censorship & Police harassment of local activists uploading censored news reports to GitHub.

It all started with a simple search query:

"market" "animal" on a github database:

<https://t.co/q2HxuUuHKA>

Only to find that it had been deleted on github due to CCP pressure!

3. Github is Censorship proof, right?

It does not get deleted! But..

<https://t.co/k7BJWUgWDg>

Arms get Twisted!

<https://t.co/ckzicj7NIE>

Please remember these brave young activists for creating a permanent record of censored news from the early days while CCP rewrites history

4. What a shock!

But thanks to the very nature of GitHub, "forks" and "clones" had been made & saved.

The best one is here:

<https://t.co/ZWiyWK9SAa>

Obviously all in Chinese ;) but tks to Google Chrome we can right click translate to English & find archived scrubbed Chinese news

5. "This is an archive of in-depth reports and personal narratives on the COVID-19 outbreak in China"

Contains media reports, non-fictional works and personal narratives related to the 2020 coronavirus pneumonia.

Part of the archive is provided by netizens, I am grateful.

6. The best repository with working links is here:

Don't bother with the Web Archive Version, many of the links do not work, so it is not very useful:

20. Wang Ping case

The "People" reporter interviewed Wang Ping, 46, who worked in the South China Seafood Market in Wuhan for four years. He was infected but was lucky.

"I felt the symptoms on the day of the shutdown of Seafood Market in Wuhan...."

<https://t.co/0ny2u4yl2h>

21. Wang Ping (cont)

"& I felt a little pain all over my body. I was still working that morning. When the seafood market was closed, I followed the boss to sell fish at another seafood market, "4 Seasons Market" in Hankou. I felt uncomfortable in afternoon & thought I had a cold"

22. Wang Ping (cont 3)

"I later thought that I might get the disease because I didn't wear a mask when working in the Seafood Market. I worked there for four years. At the beginning, I was selling vegetables. Later, I helped people move seafood, mainly salmon and seabass. "

23. Wang Ping (4)

I started working at 3 a.m. every day. I moved the seafood that was transported by the truck to the market door to the stall to sort fish , Until the end of ten o'clock in the morning, each month about 5,000 CNY (650 Euros) in income.

24. Wang Ping (5)

"The hygienic condition of our market is not very good. As soon as we walk in, the smell inside is quite big, an unspeakable smell. I haven't worn a mask at all after working in it for so long. How can I wear it?"

25. Wang Ping (6)

"There are more than 20 game meats sold in market, concentrated in a channel, snakes are piled up at door to sell & killed chickens & ducks are also sold at door, the ground is oily so we don't go that way, afraid of slipping"

(Wang Ping is a pseudonym)

<https://t.co/afYFXy6JmY>

the local market supervision bureau had revealed that 8 companies hold approval documents for wildlife management licenses.

"Actually, they have illegally operated wild animal trade"

29. George Gao

Gao Fu, a member of the high-level expert group of the National Health and Health Commission on TV told the public but then continues with a section titled: "Wild Animal Puzzle" which is of interest.

31. Wild Animal Puzzle

Prior to the emergence of the epidemic, relevant inspections confirmed that there were at least 8 merchants operating wild animals. But now, the relevant departments have denied issuing licenses for the management and use of wild animals to merchants.

32. At least 8 merchants sell wild animals.

This can be seen from information released by the Wuhan Market Supervision Bureau in 2019:

"In the Seafood Wholesale Market, law enforcement officers checked 8 merchants that sell animals such as tiger frogs, snakes, hedgehogs, etc"

33. "There are more than a dozen merchants selling game in the Western District. The wild animals sold include wild ducks, snakes, hares, etc. Those shops are located in remote places, and I don't recognize some of the things they sell, and many people buy them every day."

34. Recently, an inpatient owner and relative from the South China Seafood Market said in an interview with the China Business Daily:

"the market is divided into east and west areas, and there are more than a dozen merchants operating wild animals in the western area alone."

35. (previous image of CCDC team on January 1, 2020, taking samples for inspection)

On January 1st, when our reporter, Zhang Jiazhen, went to South China Group (who own the market) for an interview, personnel from the local propaganda department stopped him.

36. Massive Corruption - Forestry & Wildlife Officials

Wuhan City Garden and Forestry Bureau, stated that it had not issued a license for the use of wild animals to the South China Seafood Market.

<https://t.co/afYFXy6JmY>

37. According to Xinhua 2015, the case of corruption in forestry system in Danjiangkou City, Hubei, originated from Zhang Zhengxue, deputy head of management:

" After ordinary cadres sigh: "I thought it was a cold hall, and did not expect to be able to bite off so much money!"

38. According to CCTV reports, in 2018, in a case of trafficking in wild animals announced by the Forest Public Security Bureau of Jiangxi Province, there were more than 17,000 animals involved, and the sales network covered 15 provinces across the country.

39. The task force revealed that many public officials participated in the sale. There are staff members of the wildlife protection and management department that illegally issue transportation certificates for criminals and act as an umbrella to facilitate criminal activities.

40. Hubei Daily (2015) reported that Zhou Zhanhong, former party group member & chief economist of Wuhan Municipal Administration of Industry & Commerce was arrested on suspicion of abuse of power & bribery, but no trial information has been seen since.

<https://t.co/afYFXy6JmY>

41. A story of low wages, corruption, political patronage, family scandals, Macau casinos, bamboo rats, badgers, tiger frogs, hedgehogs, wild ducks, hares, seabass, salmon, snakes, slippery paths, 8 illegal wildlife merchants, cover ups and above all of animal & human suffering.

42. That's it!
