

Twitter Thread by Jordan F■Stock Trader

Jordan F■Stock Trader

@FT__Trading

From losing $15k over 2 years, to now making $15k/month...

Here's 10 tips I'd tell my younger self:

1. Focus on the process

The money will come. Stop worrying about how much money you made today

Focus on how much work you're putting in

How many hours are you studying charts?

Inputs > Outputs

2. Journal your trades!

I didn't start doing this until about a year in of trading.

It helped TREMENDOUSLY

You'll learn a lot about how you can improve and stop you from making the same mistakes

3. Listen to others

Don't be listening to the random on Twitter who just started out

But if someone with experience and a professional in their field gives you advice...

take it.

They know something you don't.

4. Stop Full Porting

Trading is not a "get rich quick" business.

It will take time.

Even with a $500 account, learn to use risk management and the money will come

5. Focus on one

Although learning everything over the years has helped..

I would have been successful much faster had I stuck to one process (day vs swing, penny vs options, etc.)

Strategy hopping only leads to more losses

6. Less is more

Stop "searching" for trades

Once you start scrolling through your watchlist looking for a setup, you've lost.

Let the trade come to you.

Set alerts when the charts setup for your strategy

7. Find a hobby

If trading is your life, you'll fail.

You need to be able to step away from the screens and not be "addicted" to trading

Find something you can do to stop you from over trading

8. Network!

Some of the best trading knowledge and tips I found were on twitter

I DM'd about 200 people when I first started and it led to me meeting my mentor

9. Stop following alerts

I only followed alerts for a little when I started and it didn't help at all

If you want real success in this game, you're going to have to learn how to trade properly

10. Focus on yourself

There will be people you know who started later than you and are more successful

It's frustrating.

But if you stay in your lane, you'll be unstoppable.

If you learned something from this thread, feel free to leave a like + RT the original tweet so others can learn too

I'm writing a thread every day for June ■

So follow me @FT_Trading if you're interested in trading strategies and psychology