Twitter Thread by Dark Psychology | Dating Master

Dark Psychology | Dating Master
@DarkPsychForMen

12 Powerful Lessons From The Book "The Man’s Guide to Women"

- Psychology Thread - women will be attracted to the expertise you demonstrate in your particular area of interest.

In other words, if you collect stamps, be the most powerful, high-status collector there is.

For starters, when a woman is afraid, hold her hand.

Even better, try to help her avoid feeling afraid in the first place.

Women need a reason for sex. Men just need a place

Women are impressed with a guy who has emotional energy, who is passionate about whatever he’s talking about, and who asks questions and really listens to the answers.

Men, you have the power to make or break a relationship.

Women want men who are there for them when they need them. They want men who are interested in them and who care about them. Women need to feel respected, heard, and connected.

To put it simply, listening is sexier than talking. Asking questions is sexier than broadcasting. Being genuinely interested in her is much more important than trying to be interesting to her.

The men who were successful were space maximizers, showing their dominance in the social setting by stretching out their legs, throwing an arm around their chair, or otherwise owning the space they occupied.

Ask for about her interests, her passions, her life dreams, her bucket list. Find out where she’s traveled and what she loves to do.

Ask her who her best friends are, and find out what they are like and what she loves about them etc.

It’s one of the best things about sex: What’s good for her is good for you, and what’s good for you is good for her.

Look into her eyes. Kiss her deeply. Run your fingers lightly up and down her body. Don’t rush. Experience her desire.

The answer is that even the best of relationships can’t give a woman everything she needs