#Year2020_ it taught me a few things; that spiritual growth is a necessity and not issue based; it increased my values of belief, faith and understanding of God of my understanding, belief and faith. It also taught me ,he walks with me and carries me when I'm tired. Therefore I'm not afraid of him. Prayers were answered , the pandemic helped me kick the nicotine addiction, oh, I'll deny the urge creeps up once in a while, but it kills itself. After my mother passed away ,I felt so alone, not lonely, but alone, and God through pandemic made me understand

Values. Values of and for things, people and above the necessity of learning to live, with what's available and not search beyond; the fascination for reading caught up with me, and I did take up serious reading. Kept myself abreast of what I needed to know but never found time to ensure that. People were helpful and caring and loving. The little relaxation of the lockdown, had me visiting temples, and, surprisingly , found people wanting me there too,the unknown became known. Doors opened out, debris flushed out,I got into serious attempts of

#Suryanamaskar, every Sunday, without fail, more concentration and focus on Nithya parayanam, thanks to RAJAN, took up reading DEVI BAGAVATHAM, and boy it opened my eyes to a lot. To begin with, I stopped looking at anything only from my perspective. Secondly it taught me to very seriously look into the views of others , especially the family and the extended family , from their perspective too - resulting in smoothing out a lot of issues. Oh yes, the year also carried with it, death of people whom I'm fond of, losing someone close and not being able to.

see the mortal remains ,to show your love and respect was and is painful - yet it was a lesson, too - nothing is permanent , indeed. I've not seen my sister and her family and my daughter and her family , except in video calls, and that hurts; the consolation is their care and Love for me, I could (which without the effects of pandemic) I wouldn't have - to them my well being - was of more concern. Yes , the year was and had its ups and downs. A year which I may not forget to the end. I've always believed fighting nature is futile & I still stand by it

My spending time here, increased, met some wonderful people, some I've learnt to ignore (a lesson learnt through pandemic), and above I need to thank one and all, like rock, virtually, but emotionally bound. I simply say we move from 2020 to 2021. Indeed. Regards. God bless all
