37 Highlights From the Book

"Tools of Titans"

■#DDBook Thread ■

1. The human body is capable of pretty much anything given the right motivation and a consistent commitment to practice.
2. When creating a masterpiece, the first step is always to create something that actually sucks.
3. If more information was the answer we would all be billionaires with perfect abs.
4. Ketogenic diets can have a demonstrable and immediate positive impact on your health, wellbeing and weight.

5. The quality of your questions determines the quality of your life.
6. Psychedelic drugs should only ever be used with caution and appropriate respect for set, setting, sitters and motivation to learn.
7. Playing Tetris can help you go to sleep by providing visual stimuli.
8. Morning rituals such as exercise, meditation and making the bed can create positive momentum for the rest of the day.
9. Meditation practices appear to be a consistent pattern for 80% of high performers featured in the book.
10. Most people play defence in life due to our habitual nature when the rewards are greater when you play offence.
11. Are you there to compete or there to win? [Arnold Schwarzenegger]
12. In life the act of making a decision stops us from being a donkey between water and hay and provides true freedom.
13. All suffering comes from a focus on you. Instead it's always better to stop complaining and take control of your life
14. The best investors always protect the downside and look for asymmetric risks and return ratios.
15. Speed is an important principle of success even if you make foot faults along the way it's important to learn to improvise rather than seek perfect.
16. To generate good ideas you need to generate 100s of bad ideas. You can do this using a daily ten principle.
17. The practice of affirmations can help prime your mind to notice important steps on your path to success.
18. The law of the category is that it is always better to create a new category then add a me-too product into the mix.
19. Creativity is an infinite resource as the more you spend the more you have.
20. Give away most of your material for free and focus on the high value customers who are happy to pay for premium.
21. Always use questions that elicit narrative responses from other people.
22. When you complain, nobody wants to help you.
23. When hiring always focus on Who rather than What
24. Every great idea is a crazy idea until the day it becomes accepted.

25. You must not fool yourself and you are the easiest person to fool.
26. Don't believe everything you think.
27. Two is one and one is none – the importance of fixing single points of failure.
28. Don't attribute malice when other people's behaviour can be explained by different factors.
29. When writing, it's always better to keep it simple and trust the reader rather than attempting to explain everything in full.
30. In many circumstances, the idea of a consensus should make you cautious and strive to seek a contrarian position.
31. All the real benefits of life come from the magic of compound interest in some form.
32. If you can't see yourself working with someone for life don't work with them for a day.
33. If you want to be taken seriously, you have to take things seriously.
34. Learn the macro from the micro and understand that the little things are often the big things.
35. Choose courage over comfort and make this a daily practice.
36. Find creative ways to use restrictions to your advantage by leveraging what you have and constructing a powerful narrative pitch around it.
37. When something has gone wrong just say "Good" and immediately start a movement towards lessons learnt and how to move on.
