The reality of biology in a single clip:

Transwomen are women

I'm not being a jerk, I'm making my point with a sledgehammer.

Pretending differences between men and women don't exist is utterly absurd, and people keep saying it. This ACLU lawyer quite literally says "Women and girls who are trans are biological women and girls."

In 2017 Craid Telfor ranked 390th in the mens 400m hurdles.

In 2018 Craig Telfor transitioned and became CeCe Telfor.

In 2019 CeCe Telfor won the women's 400m hurdles at the Womens Division II National Championship.

In what moral universe is this fair to women?

Career

Telfer is a trans woman but competed on the Franklin Pierce University men's track and field team in 2016 and 2017. In the 400 m hurdles at the 36-inch men's division height, she ranked 200th in 2016 and 390th in 2017 among NCAA Division II athletes competing in that event in the men's division those years. Under NCAA rules, transgender athletes can compete in women's events after completing one calendar year of testosterone suppression treatment.[4] Telfer

Renee Richards was a male to female transgender person who at age 45 became the 20th ranked women's player in the world.

Richards now says if the transition had at happened age 22 rather then at 40 no biological women would have had a chance:

Richards has since expressed ambivalence about her legacy, and came to believe her past as a man provided her with advantages over her competitors, saying "Having lived for the past 30 years, I know if I'd had surgery at the age of 22, and then at 24 went on the tour, no genetic woman in the world would have been able to come close to me. And so I've reconsidered my opinion."[21][22]

In 1998 Karsten Braasch, the 203rd ranked male tennis player in the world beat Venus and Serena Williams in back to back games.

It wasn't even close.

Braash got up, played 18 holes of golf drank a pair of shandies (beers mixed with lemonade) then beat Serena 6-1 and Venus 6-2

1998: Karsten Braasch vs. the Williams sisters

Another event dubbed a "Battle of the Sexes" took place during the 1998 Australian Open[56] between Karsten Braasch and the Williams sisters. Venus and Serena Williams had claimed that they could beat any male player ranked outside the world's top 200, so Braasch, then ranked 203rd, challenged them both. Braasch was described by one journalist as "a man whose training regime centered around a pack of cigarettes and more than a couple of bottles of ice cold lager".[57][56] The matches took place on court number 12 in Melbourne Park,[58] after Braasch had finished a round of golf and two shandies. He first took on Serena and after leading 5–0, beat her 6–1. Venus then walked on court and again Braasch was victorious, this time winning 6–2.[56] Braasch said afterwards, "500 and above, no chance". He added that he had played like someone ranked 600th in order to keep the game "fun"[59] and that the big difference was that men can chase down shots much easier and put spin on the ball that female players can't handle. The Williams sisters adjusted their claim to beating men outside the top 350.[56]

This dude played golf, downed a couple beers, then proceeded to beat the greatest womens tennis player in history 6-1, and her sister 6-2.

Could Serena beat me? Yes. I don't play tennis. But she couldn't be a 203rd ranked man fresh of a round of golf and a couple of beers...

The U.S. women's soccer team that won the last world cup was beat 5-2 by a group of 14 year old boys.

Look at the size difference in these pictures. The 14 year old boy dwarf the women.

I'm not saying Serena Williams is not a great athlete. She is.

I'm not saying Venus Williams is not a great athlete. She is.

I'm not saying the U.S. womems soccer tema is not great athletes. They are.

That's not my point at all. All these women could beat me at their sport.

My point is that when both male athlete and female athletes are fully trained the natural athleticism of the men gives them an advantage.

This advantage exist unless you take the pro female athletes with the best training and put them against amateur men. Even then...

There are college men that beat womens world records in track and field.

The point here is that biological women deserve a level playing field amd they are not getting it when they have to compete against biological men.

One last point....

It is an absolute shame the way we treat female athletes.

The biological advantages of men do not diminish the skill, expertise, work ethic, and athleticism of female athletes.

If we really value sports and competition then we ought to value and FUND women's sports....

Men who mock women's sports do no favor to the cause of fairness.
After all, if women's sports are a joke who cares if men can transition to being women and then compete and win all the medals?

Well I care.

And I think it isn't fair and we ought to fight for women's sports...

So keep the mocking of women's sports of my TL (thats a block or mute) and let's defend a fair playingfield for women.

This is a winning issue for us and it is also clearly the fair and moral thing to do.
