My deepest thoughts about Donald Trump that you probably won't like.

What if the entire left right war is theater? Shut out all the arguments, policy differences, hate, love, ally, opponents, and think about the cumulative direction we're heading to as a planet. ->

I'm concerned there's an element in the world that is bulldozing its way forward to amassing resources regardless of the arguments happening in politics or society as a whole. It's as if they're living alongside us but in a different dimension altogether. ->

A dimension where their will is as good as done.

If there's one thing this pandemic has taught me, it's if there ever was a nefarious force that achieved power they could tell us scared comfortable folks to sit down and shut up and we would do it. ->

Their whole 'plan' would be to make us pay attention to them. To pay attention to every detail, to every sound they make, to how their lips move as they tell us how much danger we are in.

They have authority in three important facets; one is a positional authority, -> two is an authority by qualification, and the third is authority by experience. I mean, we would be insane to not listen to such a message, and yet. We still wouldn't know if the sprinkling of truth we find is all the truth there is to be known. ->

Now, I'm not suggesting Trump and Biden are working together in some behind the scenes orchestration of events, I'm saying there's an element of people that don't care about our grievances and have become brazen in the events they are initiating. ->

It doesn't matter what we say or do, They will simply create another catastrophe, forcing us to react in concert in a manner that does not concern itself with any constitution or rule of law or the rules we've decided as a people should govern us. ->

They have no issues nominating our children for war or vaccinations. Coincidentally, both of these might be completely necessary, or they could be in the service of a few, given that a large amount of money can be made by both. ->

Even the fact that I am writing these words on this platform holds no sway over them. It doesn't matter. Someone somewhere is pulling levers enacting conflict amongst us, telling us we're victims and we have rights, and how could they, but don't worry -> they'll form an organisation to stand up for us, to take our side to make sure that we'll never be hurt again in the manner that we have, or ever be threatened in the way we've been threatened.

We're truly stuck, every decision we make is jumped on by this parasite that -> is looking for a vehicle to its own ends. We are the ones expending energy in our war with each other, they are the ones hoping from one warrior to the other, funding groups, or removing funding to fragment and exasperated groups, or keeping key people behind the scenes -> as they see fit.

Maybe the cynic in me is concerned that a large group of disenfranchised people would flock to a personality like Trump and maybe that's the plan, to de-animate them. Put us in a holding pattern. Or maybe it really is organic. ->

Either way, here's the tingling thing in the back of my neck. Trump is wild, saying just what he wants, has no control over his words, and is one of the most disciplined people i have ever seen, while being attacked on all sides, while being the leader of the free world. ->

Think about that for a minute. Is Trump a small timid man or isn't he? He's supposedly a brute, Hitler, flailing arms across a map of Europe barking commands at artillery units.

Yet, he has shown tremendous restraint - while shooting his mouth off in a way that never puts -> himself at a disadvantage in his own narrative. There's a discipline there that is over most people's heads, and as most of us understand by now, a person that has discipline over his own speech most certainly is disciplined over many other aspects of their own life. ->

Also, as far as we know, Trump has no substance abuse issues so it isn't the discipline of an addict, the manner in which an addict sets about measuring just the right dose between maximum effect and death. It isn't that type of discipline. It isn't directionless. ->

So either he is immune to criticism, or the assault against him is part of the plan, or he's the most goal oriented machines I've ever witnessed, or he has another vision he's enacting that far and away supercedes anything we're aware of, and he's one of the -> greatest leaders we've ever seen.

I hope it's the latter because as God is my witness, we are on the precipice.

Here's another lesson I've learnt though my years of torture and pain that is this life, and I give it to you for free. If someone has power, they will use it. ->

If you've given up your power to someone, they will eventually exercise it over you. Sometimes it's warranted most times it's not. Or let's say you'd hoped to appear small and harmless and the other person wasn't buying it. It's one of those things.

*wink ->

Donald Trump has all the power that could ever be afforded to any one person in today's world. It's a highly unpopular power, but a power none the less. What happens if he flips the switch, brings the heat? Without a doubt America is in trouble in a way it -> hasn't been in a long time. Half of Americans polled don't believe the selection of Joe Biden was done in a way that leaves everyone warm and fuzzy. What power does Trump have to solve that problem? What would you, dear reader, do?

If he does exercise his power, my -> hope is it's used to bring order, clarity, things that serve us because the leaders of this world have lost their minds. Is there any county of significance out there that has stood firm against personal enrichment over transparent governance. Anyone?
