Washington, DC, during the final 100 hours of the Trump Administration. A few scenes from my morning walk with omkimmage
By Farragut Square
Dupont Circle bus stop
Old Executive Office Building
Washington Monument, as close as you can get
Security barrier, presumably against Vehicle-borne IEDs. Lots of trucks out there
Streets are empty. Mostly security personnel and people taking pictures.
So many security barriers. I've never seen anything like it in this town.
Starbucks
Immigrant Food is open for business
The World Bank sticks out because not boarded up

One of the most profound things that @mkimmage said this morning as we walked through DC: "an event of the magnitude of 1/6 will take a long time to sink in."

This report drives home his point. Among the best audio reporting I have ever listened to https://t.co/1rA3dVE4ox

To those comparing the post-1/6 situation to the BLM events over the summer: you simply have no idea what you're talking about. I was here for both. The scale of the security lockdown this week — and the underlying risk of political violence — is a
