Twitter Thread by hellothere333

hellothere333
@hellothere3332

Happy new year!

Long thread.
Someone in or behind twitter gave me a "this account violated the twitter rules..." supposedly for this reply (image 1 at bottom of thread). I appealed with "A question is hate?" They upheld their decision with: "Our support team has determined that a violation did take place, and therefore we will not overturn our decision."

To proceed I deleted / removed the reply as prompted and was informed of a temporary limit of tweets, replies, likes, etc. for 6 hours (image 2). I could still access twitter and see content. To test the restriction, i clicked the like button on a tweet and then was immediately greeted with the limit page but it increased 11 hours (image 3). After that i was then unable to browse twitter content and was met with the same "we've limited your account" message every time i re-loaded it or clicked "continue to twitter" (image 4, @ 1am est)

In my experience, when a construct like a clique, fraternity, employer, or another attempts to elicit an emotional reaction or accept some aimless quest to divine the actual cause or just toil in fear of a whipping for an unkwon reason at some unkown time, it's time to look elsewhere to maintain interest as who knows when, why, what, and how it will impose next. And that experience tells me accepting such nonsense terms brings more nonsense.

No thanks!

Perhaps when one reaches a certain level of awareness and liberty one is of no use to the powers behind the slaver order givers, and even dangerous in that one might awaken the other sheep who are deep asleep in the dreams that are so expensive to produce, but yet remain delicate.

So I'm looking for a new social media outlet, over the next few days i'll kick some tires. Parler is a no go as it won't accept a google voice number. Maybe minds, but i'm open to suggestions.

I've said it before but it bears repeating, looking at the preceding decades, punctuated by 2020 and no sign of returning, maybe it's time to start over with what built the west as the powers that be have taken too much from me and others like me. And looking at the stupid and trashy media, culture, and people, what they have sowed and are sowing is so foreign to me as to be other worldly. Doesn't matter whether we are the aliens or they are, it seems to me we have no use of them and one might go so far as to come to believe they are working to get rid of us.

https://t.co/uCXWoqPKA6

@threadreaderapp unroll